

LIQUOR LAWS FOR HOTELS.
SHOULD THEY TELL TO GUESTS ON SUNDAY?

A HEARING BEFORE THE COMMISSION ON THE EXCISE LAWS—DEFINITIONS OF A HOTEL, AN INN AND A TAVERN.

The commission for the revision of the Excise Laws began yesterday morning a series of hearings on those interested in the changes of the Common Pleas, Part II. In the absence of the chairman, Daniel G. Rollins, the first to be heard was the Personal Liberty League, which was represented by Edward S. Hubbe, and by President Katzenbach, of the A. C. C. Hubbe began by saying that he represented the views of the Personal Liberty League on the question of Sunday legislation and had no connection with the liquor traffic. He held that the prohibition of the sale of liquor on Sunday was contrary to the fundamental principles of liberty, and that drunkenness on Sunday was more common than on other days, thus making the same place for opening the bars during a part of the day. The New York State and City Hotel Associations were represented by William D. Fanning and William D. Garrison. Mr. Fanning read the memorial of the Association, requesting that the provision to fix the status of hotels or inns as at present under the decision of the Supreme Court be maintained, and that the rights of travellers and guests at hotels, inns or taverns be clearly and unmistakably defined. He offered the following classification which would meet the wants of different communities, as well as aid in regulating the granting of licenses:

"First, a hotel shall be a place where all who apply and properly conduct themselves are supplied, for compensation, with meals, lodgings, refreshments and such services as are incidental to a temporary home, and wherein are a kitchen, a dining room, and at least twenty guest chambers, properly furnished for the occupation of guests. Second, an inn shall be the same as a hotel, except that the number of furnished guest-chambers shall be at least ten, and, third, a tavern the same as a hotel or inn, except that the number of guest-chambers shall not be less than five, and in addition good and sufficient stabling for travellers' horses shall be provided." Having thus defined the words, Mr. Fanning urged that the law should provide that any person holding a license as a hotel, inn or tavern keeper should have a right at all times to serve spirits and malt liquors and wines to actual travellers and guests.

Mr. Garrison argued that the same line, saying that hotel keepers wanted the right to serve guests with liquor by their meals or in their rooms, but did not want their bars open on Sunday. They were all anxious to obey the law, and would do so, and only wanted the law to be explicit so that they would not be liable to be brought up before the Grand Jury for doing what they had a right to do. He also favored a law similar to that of England, which provides that if a hotel keeper sells to a man whom he ought not to sell to, he shall be liable on examination. He should be found that the man was intoxicated by pretending to be a traveller or a person to whom liquor might be legally sold, but that the person so deceiving shall be the one to be punished. Mr. Garrison made rather hurried remarks in opposition to any law prohibiting the Sunday sale of liquor to regular guests with their meals or in their rooms, and said that on the three Sundays in the summer of 1917, when the hotel keepers stopped the sale of liquor entirely there was more drunk eness in his hotel than in any other three days in his experience. Those who wanted liquor had it in stock on Saturday night or went out and got it elsewhere and drank much more than they were in the habit of doing when they had it at the hotel with their meals. He thought that if the old laws compelling a drunkard to sweep the streets with a ball and chain attached to his feet were in force, there would not be so many young men who thought it a smart thing to "point the town red" as now.

The last argument was made by William H. Steinham, of the Retail Grocers' Union, who argued in favor of graded licenses that grocers who had a small "shelf trade," in bottles only, and amounting to about $1,000 a year, should pay a lower license than the large stores, or the places which sold by the glass to drunkards. The commission meets again this forenoon at 10 o'clock to hear the testimony of the National Liquor Dealers' Protective Association.

ERASTUS T. TEFFT'S WILL FILED.
The will of four codicils attached, of Erastus T. Tefft, of the dry-goods firm of Tefft, Weller & Co., was filed yesterday for probate. It was executed on January 2, 1886. The testator bequeaths to his wife, Alma Griswold Tefft, all his houses, carriages and stable equipment, and all the household furniture. At her death the property is to go to the testator's son, Frank M. Tefft, a student at the University of Rome, N. Y., receives $5,000. The executors also receive $10,000 in trust to pay the income to this sister so long as she takes care of her brother, George E. Tefft, and at his death she is to receive the principal. Two-fifths of the residue of the estate are to be held in trust for the benefit of the testator's widow during her life. This is in lieu of dower. Mrs. Tefft is also to receive $24,000 a year from one of the testator's business interests in monthly instalments without accounting to the executors.

Of the other three-fifths, and the residue of the bequest to Mrs. Tefft at her death, one fifth is given to the testator's son William E. Tefft, and another to his son Frank; $5,000 is to be taken out of the remaining one-fifth and held in trust for the benefit of one Tefft, widow of his son Charles G. Tefft. At her death the principal is to be paid to her two daughters, Mrs. Anna Boudin and Clara Boudin. The remainder of this fifth is to be divided in three equal parts, one of which is to go to Anna Boudin, another to Clara Boudin, and the third to the testator's son, Frank M. Tefft. The will directs that whatever interest the testator has in the firm of Tefft, Weller & Co. shall be required to remain intact for the time stated in the partnership agreement. The interest from this is to be paid to the legatees proportionately. William E. and Frank Tefft, sons, and Joseph H. Weller, partner, are appointed executors.

JOHN H. REED'S FUNERAL.
The funeral of John H. Reed, of the dry-goods firm of Dale, Reed & Cooley, who died suddenly on Friday, was held yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock at St. Peter's church. A large number of the friends and business associates of Mr. Reed were present to pay the last tribute to his memory. The services were conducted by the Rev. Dr. John Hall, assisted by the Rev. Oscar McCullough, of Indianapolis. Dr. Hall spoke sympathetically of the family and friends. Mr. McCullough said an eloquent tribute to the faithful, upright and virtuous life of Mr. Reed. A select quartet sang the hymns "Thy Will Be Done" and "Only a Little While." The burial will be private, and will take place this forenoon at Woodlawn. A large number of the dry-goods men of the city were present, among them being nearly all of the employees of the old house of Dale, Reed & Cooley, and those of the present house of Dale, Reed & Cooley.

CAUGHT STEALING ELECTRIC LIGHT WIRES.
Albert E. Schouler, superintendent of the United States Illuminating Company, was complainant in Jefferson Market Court yesterday against two men, John Dowd, of No. 102 Washington-st., and William Walker, of No. 123 Liberty-st.

"Within three months, twenty-five miles of wire have been stolen," said the superintendent. The men had coils of seventy-one pounds of wire, valued at $30, on their shoulders when arrested. The inspectors of the United States Illuminating Company discovered that the wire had been taken from the corner of One-hundred and Twenty-third and Broadway streets.

Walker and Dowd denied stealing the wire. Justice Duffy remanded the prisoners.

A CONDUCTOR FALLS FROM A MOVING TRAIN.
John Fiero, age fifty, conductor of the Harlem Road train which left the Grand Central Station at 10:30 a. m. yesterday, met with a serious accident as the train was passing through the tunnel south of Ninety-fifth-st. He had gone through the train, collecting tickets, and had reached the end of the last car. The smoke in the dark tunnel whirled about his head, and he fell nearly all the way down the side of the car. Thinking that he had to go into one more car, he stepped off the platform and fell behind the swiftly moving train. The train was stopped, and the brakemen went back to find the conductor lying on the track stunned and helpless. He was put on a stretcher and carried to the station at One-hundred and Twenty-third-st. From that place he was carried in an ambulance to the Harlem Hospital. He was bruised about the body and limbs, and his face was cut, but he was expected to recover.
